Telework Exchange Offers Telework Technology Exposé

Public-Private Partnership Releases “Straight Talk on Telework Technology” Paper at October 15th Town Hall Meeting

ALEXANDRIA, Va., October 9, 2008 – Telework ExchangeSM, a public-private partnership focused on telework in government, will release the “Straight Talk on Telework Technology” paper at the Fall 2008 Telework Exchange Town Hall Meeting in Washington D.C. on October 15th. Telework Exchange worked with leading public and private-sector organizations to compile a comprehensive primer to better understand available telework technology solutions for legislators as well as government telework advisors and managers. The paper will be available at the Fall 2008 Town Hall Meeting as well as after the event at www.teleworkexchange.com/straighttalk.

Telework Exchange research shows that telework budgets are growing – 68 percent of Federal IT decision-maker respondents note that telework spending will increase in the next two years. “Straight Talk on Telework Technology” provides an overview of technology and solutions readily available and proven to support these telework investments.

“Telework continues to drive ahead as a viable option for business operations – and today’s technology is paving the way,” said Cindy Auten, general manager, Telework Exchange. “It is critical that key telework stakeholders understand the established and emerging technologies that have a significant impact on the way that Americans work remotely. It is fitting to distribute the paper at the Fall 2008 Town Hall Meeting – an event focused on understanding how to implement successful telework programs using mobile technology.”

The Fall 2008 Town Hall Meeting brings government professionals together to discuss how to take telework to the next level and how technology enables telework adoption. Event keynotes include Aneesh Chopra, Secretary of Technology for the Commonwealth of Virginia and Alex Diacre, Lead Solutions Engineer for Google.
